IS THIS HIGHER EDUCATION?

Gross Insurance in a Girls' School.

The following spicy piece of news is from the Sydney, N. S. W., Herald of June 13, 1890:

An outbreak took place at the Girls' Industrial School, Paramatta, about 6:30 last evening. As the girls were being marched to their singing lesson, the signal was given, and a number of the girls broke from the line, ran to the back of the building, and commenced throwing stones at the windows, smashing the windows, and at the same time using frightful language. Miss M'Alphin, in whose charge the girls were, marched the remainder to the dormitories, and then asked the rebellious ones to come in. They replied that they would not; they had been suspected of being about to create a riot, and now they would go on with it. Mr. Spier, the superintendent, went to the girls and got the same reply. Two girls signified their intention of giving in if one or two of the others, presumably the leaders, would. Things soon got so bad that the police were sent for. Inspector Latimer arrived with a number of policemen. The girls submitted, but kept up a frenzied shouting, using the vilest language. The prison van was sent for, and was backed up to the door. The girls rushed into it frantically, and were lodged in the lockup.

Mr. Spier states that the girls have been exceptionally good of late. The cane had only been used in three instances since he had been there—about six weeks. His opinion was that the girls expected others back yesterday who had been released, and they determined to get into prison with the hope that they would also be released when their sentence expired. During the riot they told some of the officers that this was the reason. They also said that they had no fault to find with Mr. Spier or Mrs. Spier, who, they said, had treated them well. No attempt was made to assault anybody; they contented themselves with screaming, cursing, and breaking windows. Mr. Spier told them it would be worse for them. They replied, "We don't mind that; we will be free afterwards." Mr. Spier had a cell strong enough, but the gas and water pipes run through it, and he was afraid the girls would tear them down. There were 10 girls in the riot, their ages ranging from 14 to 18 years. Mr. Hugh Taylor, M. L. A., was present and tried to pacify them, but they simply gave three cheers for him and resumed their babel. Two of the inmates who were not implicated went into fits. The opinion is that the whole secret of the riot may be traced to the fact that other girls were released after being sent to prison for similar conduct. As the girls were being driven away nearly all said, "Good-bye, Mr. and Mrs. Spier; you have treated us well; it is not your fault."

DEATH BY OVER-EXERCITION.

A Lad Dies in a Race.

The Auckland, N. Z., Herald of July 14th, contains an account of a boy named Thomas Wilson dying from over-exercition. A number of boys were amusing themselves by playing the game of "Hare and Hounds." They had been running (and walking at short intervals) for an hour and a half. They were almost coming to a finish, Wilson was a "hare," and nearly side by side with him was another boy named Sands. Wilson stopped and exclaimed, "I'm done." Shortly after he fell. A gentleman saw, from his residence near by, the boy fall, and went to his assistance. Finding the lad weak and unconscious, the gentleman procured some spirit and poured it into Wilson's mouth, without effect. The pulse was feeble, and in a few minutes became imperceptible. A doctor was soon in attendance, but failed to restore animation. The medical man expressed the opinion that the boy had died from over-exercition. The lad's father said that his son left home in apparently good health and spirits, and made no complaint of any kind, nor had he ever done so. This incident might serve as a caution against over-exercition at athletic exercises.
